

Title: Goosebumps - Dead Dogs Still Fetch, a.k.a. "My Dog Seth"

Authors: R.L. Stine and Braden Thomas Gardner

Braden and his sister Jessica love playing fetch with their adorable dog Seth, a 3 year old Black Labrador retriever. (Wing: PUPPY! And what better place to play fetch with Seth then in the nearby graveyard? Sure it's dark, and dank, and creepy, but that just means no one'll bother them while they play.

Well Mrs. Braden-And-Jessica's mom didn't think her kids should be playing in the graveyard. They could get tetanus! Or malaise! They should play somewhere safer, like out in traffic or in the parking lot of the 7-11.

Braden wasn't gonna stand for that, as he argued that playing in the graveyard is fun! After all, that's where he found Seth.

The next day, while totally not listening to their mom like a couple of bosses, Braden and Jessica continued to play fetch with Seth. But for some reason Seth was taking longer than usual to come
Oh wait here he comes now.
Uh, um, that's not a stick in Seth's mouth.
That's a SKULL
AN HONEST TO GOD, HUMAN SKULL.

Seth I'm not even mad at you for potentially desecrating someone's remains how did you manage to carry back an entire human skull in your mouth?
[Wing: ...fair point!]

Which is also something the skeleton that appeared in front of Braden and Jessica wanted t-OH SHIT IT'S A SKELETON!

Enraged, the headless skeleton took back its skull from the Labrador retriever and its human owners. Returning its head bone to its neck bone, the skeleton could now speak and convey its desire to exact revenge on Braden, Jessica, and Seth for this humiliation.

Braden wasn't scared.

Jessica wasn't scared.

SETH wasn't scared.

[Wing: Monster Dog wouldn't be scared, either!]

Confused, the skeleton demanded to know why the two kids weren't pissing themselves when they pointed to a nearby grave marker.
With its eyeless sockets, the skeleton read the name on the grave marker.

No, uh, the one next to it.

SETH

It was at this point that the skeleton knew... he done fucked up
Because you can mess with the dead.

And you can mess with a dog.

But you CAN'T mess with a dead dog.

Because (INSERT TITLE HERE).